

Joanne Giardini-Russell is the owner of Giardini Medicare, an independent agency that provides Medicare products to the public. She and her team of Medicare nerds at Giardini Medicare specialize in the “transition” to the Medicare system. Do you need Medicare? If so, how do you get there in a stress-free and logical fashion.

Having spent years in the financial and insurance industries, she recognized an enormous and unfilled niche. Namely, the lack of quality education and assistance in “best practices” in getting yourself to the Medicare system.

She and her team of agents have grown a firm that can help assess the “do I need Medicare, how do I get it, how does it work” questions and more. They assist in the transition from the workplace era and into the Medicare years and enroll people into the proper Medicare products.

Joanne routinely leads Medicare sessions for financial advisors, CPAs, Credit Unions, and the public. Additionally, she often writes Medicare content for publications and websites such as Advisor Perspectives, SixtyandMe.com, and InsuranceNews.Net. She and Cameron Giardini produce the “Transition to Medicare” Podcast, he produces the company YouTube channel while she handles TikTok. The company website is <https://gmedicareteam.com/>

Joanne resides in Michigan with husband, Jeff.

Three of her adult children work with her at Giardini Medicare; creating what we affectionately refer to as the “First Family of Medicare”.
